About Dental Implants

Dental implants are usually screws that are placed directly into the jawbone, so they can serve as "roots" to hold or support the artificial teeth. They may be used to replace a tooth or several teeth which have been lost due to a dental disease or injury.

Dental implants are designed to function the same way as natural teeth, so that within limits you can still enjoy your favourite foods, speak normally and smile with confidence.

Aside from replacing lost teeth, dental implants can also act as a support for dentures, making the dentures more comfortable to use and more secure. The implants can also be used as a support for a dental bridge so you would not have to deal with partial, removable dentures.

Dental implants on their own can provide you with more natural-looking, and more comfortable usage – so you can go on your daily lives feeling like you have never lost a tooth at all.
